

Forum to focus on Colorado's water future

Written by | By Coloradoan staff

Sep. 24

coloradoan.com

The future of water in Colorado will be the subject of a Saturday community forum hosted by state lawmakers from Fort Collins.

Reps. Randy Fischer and Joann Ginal and Sen. John Kefalas, all Democrats, will join a panel that includes the governor's water adviser John Stulp, Mark Easter of Save the Poudre, Reagan Waskom of the Colorado Water Institute, Robert Sakata of Sakata Farms and Drew Peternell of Trout Unlimited.

The forum will tackle the topic of ensuring public interests have a voice in planning Colorado's water future. It begins at 10 a.m. at the community room in Old Town Public Library, 201 Peterson St.

— Coloradoan staff